RESULTS OF EAS CHARACTERISTICS CALCULATIONS IN THE FRAMEWORK OF THE UNIVERSAL HADRONIC INTERACTION MODEL NEXUS

N. N. Kalmykov (1), S.S. Ostapchenko (1,2) and K. Werner (3)
(1) D. V. Skobeltsyn Institute of Nuclear Physics, Moscow State University, 119899, Moscow, Russia, (2) Institut für Kernphysik, Forschungszentrum Karlsruhe, D76021 Karlsruhe, Germany, (3) SUBATECH, Université de Nantes—IN2P3/CNRS—École de Mines, Nantes, France.

An extensive air shower (EAS) calculation scheme based on cascade equation and some EAS characteristics for energies $10^{14} - 10^{17}$ eV are presented. The universal hadronic interaction model NEXUS is employed to provide the necessary data concerning hadron–air collisions. The influence of model assumptions on the longitudinal and lateral EAS development is discussed in the framework of NEXUS and QGSJET models.