SHORT GAMMA-RAY FRONT AIR CHERENKOV EXPERIMENT

Stephan LeBohec (1), Frank Krennrich (1), David Carter-Lewis (1) and Trevor Weekes (2)
(1) Physics Department of Iowa State University, Ames, IA50010, U.S.A.,
(2) FLWO, SAO, Amado, AZ85645-0097, U.S.A..
lebohec@iastate.edu/Fax: 1-515-294-6027

Atmospheric Cherenkov Imaging Telescopes can be used to search for GeV \( \gamma \)-ray bursts with a very high sensitivity in the mostly unexplored time scale from 100\( ns \) to 10\( \mu s \). In this paper we review the motivations for this search and present the techniques being developed for the SGARFACE experiment which will be implemented on the Whipple telescope.