ATMOSPHERIC SENSING FOR GROUND-BASED GAMMA-RAY TELESCOPES

(1) Department of Physics, Science Laboratories, University of Durham, Durham, DH1 3LE, UK.

t.j.l.mccomb@durham.ac.uk/Fax: +44 191 3747190

The atmospheric Cherenkov technique is unique in that the atmosphere is an integral part of the detector. A realistic goal for the next generation of telescopes is to make energy assignments and flux determinations to better than 10%. We discuss the requirements for atmospheric monitoring that will be necessary to achieve this and look forward to how these requirements can be implemented.